

Montana Milestones Part C of IDEA Early Intervention Program

Understanding the Procedural Safeguards for Families

Regulations for the Early Intervention Program for Infants and Toddlers with Disabilities, Part C of IDEA (U.S. Department of Education, 2011) 34 CFR § 303.400-449.

Prior Written Notice

The early intervention program must give you advance written information about any evaluations, services, or other actions affecting your child. Parents know their children best. The information you share with us will make sure that the evaluations and services are right for you. The “paper work” assures that you get all the details before any activity.

Use of parent’s native language or preferred mode of communication

It is your right to thoroughly understand all activities and written records about your child. If you prefer another language or way of communicating (such as braille, sign language, etc.), we will get an interpreter, if possible. The early intervention program wants you to understand so that you can be an informed team member and decision-maker.

Parent Consent

The early intervention program needs your permission to take any actions that affect your child. You will be asked to give your consent in writing before we evaluate or provide services. Be sure you completely understand the suggested activities. By being involved, you can help the early intervention program plan services that match your family’s preferences and needs. The early intervention program needs to explain what happens if you give your consent and if you do not give your consent.

Confidentiality

The early intervention program values the information you and other service and health care providers have learned about your child. We will ask others for this information, but we need your written permission to do so. Just as the early intervention program needs your permission to get your child’s records from other providers, the records that the early intervention program will develop will not be shared with anyone outside the early intervention program unless you give your permission. The early intervention program will assure your records are kept private.

Access to records

The early intervention record is your family’s record. You can see anything in the early intervention program’s records about your child and family. If you do not understand the way records are written, the information in the child’s record will be explained to you in a way you understand. You are a team member and we want you to have the same information as other team members.

Parent Consent and ability to decline services

With the other members of your child’s early intervention team, you will consider which services can best help you accomplish the outcomes that you want for your child and family. You will be asked to give your consent for those services that you want. You do not have to agree to all services recommended. You can say no to some services and still get the services that you do want. If you decide to try other services later, you can give your consent then.

Mediation

If you and the early intervention team do not agree on plans or services, or if you have other complaints about your experience with the program, there are procedures for resolving your concerns quickly. If informal ways of sharing your concerns with your team and the early intervention program don’t work, you may file a complaint. Mediation will be offered as a voluntary first step. A trained, impartial mediator will facilitate problem solving between you and the early intervention program. You may be able to reach an agreement that satisfies you both. If not, you can go ahead with a due process hearing to resolve your complaint. Mediation will not slow down the hearing process. Airing and solving problems can improve communication and make programs stronger. Montana offers mediation before a formal complaint is filed.

Due Process Procedures

A due process hearing is a formal procedure that begins with a written complaint. The hearing will assure that a knowledgeable and impartial person, hears your complaint and decides how to best resolve it. The early intervention program recognizes your right to make decisions about your child and will take your concerns seriously. You are given a copy of regulations that describe all these rights and procedures in detail because it is important that you understand.
