Definition

CBPRS is intensive behavior management and stabilization services in home, workplace, or community settings, for a specified period, in which the problem or issue impeding recovery or full functioning is defined and treated. The purpose of CBPRS is to reduce disability and restore functioning, and help individuals return to natural settings and activities that are part of a socially integrated life. Through CBPRS, a behavioral health aide supports the member by augmenting life, behavioral, and social skills training needed to reach the member's identified treatment goals and restore member functioning in the community. During skills training, the behavioral health aide clearly describes the skill and expectations of the member's behavior, models the skill, engages the member in practice of the skill, and provides feedback on skill performance. Restoring these skills helps prevent relapses and strengthens goal attainment. These behavioral health aides may consult with family members or other key individuals who are part of a member's treatment team to determine how to help the member be more successful in meeting treatment goals.
